BaySide house fire

BY ELLIS CUEVAS

A family of five shimmied down a pole from second story bedrooms as their Bay-Side Park home was gutted by fire early Thursday.

Robert Byrant, his wife, 10-year-old daughter and two sons, nine and seven, were asleep when he was awakened by a cracking noise at about 4:45 a.m. Thursday.

'I heard some popping noises and thought it may have been the children's cats playing downstairs in the two-story frame house we were renting. 'As I awoke, I looked at the bug light we had in the bedroom and I could see the rays of the smoke in the light. I jumped up and tried to go downstairs and could see the kitchen in flames and the smoke smelled like plastic was burning," Bryant reported.

Mississippi Mammas' tune laments solid rocket fuel

BY D.C. HARVILL

Songs of protest have long been a colorful outcropping of American's freedom of speech, lending expression to important issues, and giving rise to such musical legends as Joan Baez, Bob Dylan and Woody Guthrie.

A local issue has has inspired a Coast duo to compose and record their own song of protest.

When the controversy surrounding NASA's Advanced Solid Rocket Motor (ASRM) tests proposed for Stennis

Space Center began receiving media coverage on the Coast, Dodie Droddy and Karen Long, collectively known as The Mississippi Mammas, knew it was an issue they needed to address

Berry decision reversed

BY DENA BISNETTE

A lawsuit against Hancock County Board of Supervisors and Sheriff Ronald Peterson has been rejected on appeal, saving the county $200,000.

Peterson told the board of supervisors this week that the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals had rejected an appeal by Jack Berry, a former Hancock County Jail inmate who sued the county after being injured in a fire that started in his cell.

Berry filed the suit in 1986 after signing a covenant not to sue with the county, which in return agreed to pay the medical expenses related to the injuries he sustained.

Berry alleged that the county and Peterson had failed to provide him with a safe jail in which to be detained.

In March 1988, a jury decided that Berry should be paid $200,000 but the defendants appealed.

The appeal was denied earlier this month on a split decision, which was based on the finding that Berry fully understood the covenant not to sue and was not coerced into signing it, according to a copy of the Peterson asked the board to consider using the $200,000 for another purpose. Gerald Gex, the board attorney, is looking into the legal questions surrounding other ways to use the money, which was obtained through the sale of the old Hancock General Hospital building.

The board meets again at 9 a.m. Wednesday, when the agenda will include Port and Harbor matters.

School auditorium bids to be opened

BY DENA BISNETTE

Bids on the long-awaited construction of an auditorium at Bay Senior High School will be opened at 2 p.m. Dec. 19.

The Bay-Waveland School Board will meet at 7 p.m. the same day to approve the bids.

Architect Fred Wagner submitted final plans to the board Monday night and asked for approval on the bid opening date. Between the afternoon opening and the evening meeting, Wagner will review the bids to determine which he will recommend to the board as lowest and best, as is required by

The plans call for an 11,820 square-foot facility with 601 seats and was prepared with the assistance of a citizen committee. Board President Charles Benvenutti and other board members have already stated that the new auditorium will be made available for community

The only vote of nonapproval came from board member Linda Penrose, who had voted against building the auditorium in the

The auditorium is one of the last phases in a $3.4 million building program that started in 1987 and included renovations at North Bay Elementary and the former junior high which now houses Bay Middle School, conversion of the former junior high shop building into the board's new administrative offices and additions to Bay Senior High and Waveland

Elementary. In addition to the auditorium, which is scheduled for completion in October 1990, the school district plans to construct a multi-purpose building to be used as an arts center. That structure will also be built on the high school campus and will back up to the auditorium to allow its use as dressing rooms and easier access from the stage to the band hall housed in the arts center. In other business, the board:

Rural residents around the state were bracing themselves for two-months of survival in conditions that can only be com-. pared to life under military occupation.

Armed men lining the streets; two-way radios crack-ling with talk of strategies and targets; gunshots ringing out; citizens afraid to leave their.

homes-afraid for their lives. The description fits Beirut, Northern Ireland, the Gaza Strip or—just as easily—rural Mississippi during deer season.

Autumn and winter may be seasons of holiday celebration but, for many, they also are seasons of dread.

Each November, residents are literally held hostage in their own homes, terrorized by the practitioners of an illegal activity known as road hunting.

Road hunters typically hunt in large groups. Eighteen-or twenty-member parties are not uncommon. Their usual tactic is to spread out along a stretch of road adjacent to a tract of land and release their hounds on the opposite side of the property.

When deer are driven from cover by the dogs, the road's right of way serves as a clear shooting lane along which the animals can be shot.

This unsporting technique poses danger for people who travel on public roads, but the problems do not end there.

Personal horror stories abound among property owners throughout the state. Some tell of near misses, and of being harrassed and threatened by gun-wielding members of road hunting "gangs". Others tell of cut fences, shot livestock and rampant tresspassing.

They all dread the advent of deer season and, citing a litany of punctured car tires, bashed mailboxes and burned barns and houses, express fear of reprisal should they present any opposition to road hunters. "It is only a matter of time before some innocent person is killed," said a rural resident who asked not to be identified.

The Mississippi Property Rights Association, an 800-member group headed by John Stack of Meridian hopes to see enforceable laws rassed that are more favorable to the landowners.

Because such unscrupulous behavior by a minority of hunters paints a negative image of the hunting community as a whole, hunters who persue their sport in more sportsmanlike manners also are opposed to road hunting.

Road hunting is illegal under Mississippi statutes but, due to a loophole in the law, hunters who engage in the activity are able to circumvent the law with relative ease.

Section 97-15-13 of the Mississippi Code prohibits hunting "in, on or across any street, public road or public highway or an interstate railroad or the right-of-way thereof."

This same statute expressly prohibits discharging any firearm in any of the above situations.

The statute is fine up to this. point, as far as road hunting opponents are concerned, One sentence, however: "A person shall not be deemed hunting if his firearm is within the passenger cab of a motor vehicle." renders the law virtually worthless-all unenforceable.

This sentence, intended only to allow hunters to travel to and, from hunting locations, also makes it necessary for law enforcement officers to catch a hunter with a loaded gun or actually shooting on a roadway before he can make a roadhunting arrest or issue a citation.

According to sources familiar with road hunting methods, the "gangs" usually post a lookout at each end of the road they are hunting. When conservation officers or other law enforcement personnel are spotted, the lookouts notify the rest of the party via CB radio.

The "gang" members then become instantly legal simply by placing their guns in the cabs of their trucks or by slipping the shells from them. "Our hands are tied by that one sentence," a conservation officer said.

Please do not forget to vote on Tuesday; there are two very importance races to be settled.

There is a runoff in the Senatorial District 46 race and also for east Hancock County constable.

These are two important positions and I hope everyone who is qualified to vote will go to the polls and elect the candidate or candidates of their choice.

All Hancock County qualified electors, except in two precincts will vote in the senatorial race and about half will vote in the constable race.

Polls are open from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m.

I urge you to also remind your relatives, friends and neighbors to be sure and vote.

We hope to see you at the polls.

This is the time of year when Bay St. Louis Fire Chief Andrew Lizana and his volunteers begin the task of preparing Christmas presents for hundreds of deserving children.

The Hancock County Doll and Toy Fund is an agency of the United Way of Hancock County and also receives donations from political bodies, businesses and individuals.

I spoke to Chief Lizana on the telephone on Friday and he told me he is now taking cash donations, new toys and also reconditionable toys.

The Doll and Toy project began many years ago with firefighters reconditioning toys for only a few deserving children and now it covers hundreds throughout the

If your children have outgrown toys that can be recycled, just drop them off at the Bay St. Louis Fire Station, Bookter Street and Old Spanish Trail.

Chief Lizana has many helpers and receives assistance from some of our senior residents who even help recondition dolls.

Bicyles and tricycles are repainted and repaired by firefighters.

Over the years many of the merchants have been very helpful with the project by giving special prices and also making donations.

This is a community effort and I hope that every deserving child will have a toy or two for Christmas. I also know it does a world of good for our Firefighter Association members when they deliver toys to the children each vear.

If you can help in any way, or need further information call Chief Lizana at 467-4736, your efforts will be greatly appreciated.

However, there is one exception.

The MEC does not support the Corporation for Educational Innovation, which is proposed in the bill as a board to oversee education reform in the state. MEC feels the dollars required to operate such a new state organization could be better spent elsewhere and that any oversight duty should be left to the Lay Board of Education, where it presently rests.

If additional revenues are required, any new taxes should be as broadly based as possible to allow more Mississippians to share in the investment for education.

The need to improve education in Mississippi is very real. A recent survey of Mississippi business and industry leaders revealed that high school and vocational education students are inadequately prepared.

Fifty-eight percent of the respondents said they are dissatisfied with the educational preparedness of Mississippi's vocational school graduates. Worse, 75 percent said they are dissatisfied with the educational preparedness of Mississippi's high school graduates.

We encourage the Governor and the Legislature to act responsibly, to put aside political differences, to be fair and open with those of us who pay their salaries, and not turn "Mississippi's BEST" into "Mississippi's BEAST!"

House Speaker Ford names special committee to study education

There was more evidence last week that House Speaker Tim Ford is no longer "dancing with the ones who brung him" to power in the overthrow of the House old guard leadership nearly three years ago.

Ford named a 29-member special House committee to study Gov. Ray Mabus' education reform program that was significantly devoid of the key insurgents who were the backbone of the 1987 House rules reforms which led to Ford's election as speaker.

Of the 29 put on the special committee, only seven were among the 75 members who voted for the 1987 democratic rules changes which toppled the regime of powerful Speaker Buddie Newman.

Fourteen of the House members Ford named to the committee were part of the 45 who had voted against the rules reforms. Percentagewise, 31 percent are rules change opponents, while only 9 percent are proponents.

Perhaps even more telling is the fact that not one of the "House 26" rebels who began the rules reform movement back in 1984 was named to the special education committee.

While Ford named Rep. Jim Simpson of Long Beach, the chairman of the standing House Education Committee, as chairman of the special committee, he left off the special committee 16 members of the House standing committee on education.

In the process, Ford has excluded the most progressive members of the House who 'live and die" for education from the super committee that will no doubt decide the fate of Mabus' $500 million education reform package.

Instead, he has appointed some of the staunchest public education foes and anti-Mabus members in the House to the committee.

One reading that can be taken from the committee lineup is that Ford has made a calculated move to distance himself from Mabus' legislative Ford had started out in 1988 as more or less the unofficial House floor leader for Mabus. but it became increasingly evi dent early in the 1989 session that Ford no longer would serve as a torch-bearer for the governor.

Mabus, who calls his ambitious education program "Mississippi's BEST"—an acronym for Better Education for Success Tomorrow-last week backed down from earlier strong indications that he would call a special session of the Legislature in December to tackle the program.

Ford had openly opposed a special session, contending that there was "no emergency" to consider the education package.

Presumably, since Ford created the special 29-member committee to dissect the Mabus education package prior to beginning of the 1990 regular session in January, he will assign the bill to the special committee in the regular session, bypassing the standing House committee system.

Some House members privately contend that the makeup of the special education committee represents the hard core of a new coalition Ford is putting together to seek changes in the House rules and recoup some powers of the speaker taken away by the 1987 reforms.

One rule that Ford now says he is opposed to is the limitation to two terms that a speaker can serve. This had been one of the key rules changes aimed at preventing another dynasty in the speakership such as Newman and the late Walter Sillers had

Ford is believed to also want the power to approve betweensessions travel expenses for members taken away from the House Management Committee and given back to the speaker as it was under Newman. Control over travel money was always used as a piece of patronage by Newman to reward his lieutenants and dangle over the head of prospective recruits to his inner circle.

One thing is now certain in the Mississippi House: The coalition which the idealistic reformers put together in 1987 to open the doors of the House to a fresh breeze of democracy is now dead.

Whether or not those doors wil stay open is very much in

HNC teacher protests media coverage of fire

To the Editor: I would like to comment on one of your news reports on Friday, Nov. 10. This report concerned the fire hazard at Hancock North Central.

I find it hard to believe that such a small incident is worthy of the news coverage you gave to it. I teach at this school, and I can tell you that every possible safeguard has been taken to insure the safety of our students. In fact, the teachers think that we are assigned unnecessary duties to protect the students from harm. Everyone—students, teach-parents administrators-realize that our physical plant needs improvement. Hence, the new school which is under construction. Meanwhile, every precaution has been taken to be sure that our students are safe during their day at school.

Furthermore, I have contacted Dave Vincent of WLOX several times in the past two years about covering some of the good things happening in our school, namely projects that the Student Council has sponsored to encourage more interest in the school by the students, parents and other community members. We have gotten no response other than a mere acknowledgement that there had been contact.

I feel that Hancock North Central is treated like a stepchild by the news media except for sports coverage or exaggerated coverage of a ridiculous little incident that amounted to nothing because of the alertness of teachers and administrators.

I look forward to a positive report on HNC in the near future.

Sincerely, Betty Allen Hancock North Central High School

Dear Editor:

How many cracked windshields, broken headlamps and front-end auto damage must our citizens suffer from loose rocks and ruts before Hwy. 607 is resurfaced?

More than a month ago the contractor began chipping away the top surface the entire distance from I-10 to US 90. They've left it very rough with loose rocks all this time (paved only one lane for perhaps two or three blocks).

More improvements to boat launches suggested

Dear Editor.

I would like to point to and exhalt the recent improvements to the boat launch at the end of North Beach. Another noteworthy effort by the board of supervisors to make access to our waterways more safe and attractive while making excellent use of our public funds. The craftsmanship displayed in the work is of the highest caliber for such a facility.

I would like to commend the board of supervisors for its acceptance of the boating community as a valuable and necessary part of the economic and social structure of Hancock County. I hope the public will let them know that we all support them in their effort to improve our county.

To that end, I would like to suggest improvements to other boating facilities in the county. The Dunbar pier and the pier by Big E's would benefit from better docking dolphins, pilons, ladders and piers. If such deepwater docks existed, I believe the boating use would increase greatly.

The more boats we have using our waterways, the more money gets left in our county. Free public launches, safe docks and anchoring areas all would do a lot to make Hancock County more attractive to the wouldbe tourist, boater and våcationer.

When spring comes and all those tourists driving across our bridge see all those boats out there on the Bay, they might not keep going to Mobile Bay, St. Andrews Bay and the Gulfin Florida. Our little sleepy, bedroom community will (deservedly so) become the jewel of the Mississippi Gulf oast (that it is),

While a few will never accept improvements and changes, they will still benefit from the wise choices our elected officials make. If not our present, certainly our future lies on and around our waterways. Of course, aluminum dust won't make it very pretty.

But, I'm sure our board of supervisors would not allow our pristine environment to become an acidic wasteland. Their presence of mind now will advance our place in the future many Other improvements I suggest to area boating facilities: graded parking and signs to the boat launch on North Beach; picknic tables around the big trees at same; electrical service, trash cans, designated trailer parking, and especially, waste disposal sites.

After all the work and money the board has put into the improvement, they can't just let it sit, unsigned like the walking track, a case in point where folks park on the dirt instead of having a sign that tells them to park on the paved parking lot. Keep up the good work, board, and I'll keep voting for you. Mark W. Mason

Health club's sudden closing should not have been overlooked

Dear Editor:

I have been reading your paper for a number of years and am generally satisfied with the way you present the news on the social activities of our community. One must realize however, that there are many things going on in our community which should be reported besides the social events.

There are many people living in the area who "were" members of Nautilus One, the health club in Diamondhead. As you should know, the club closed its doors last week. The members of the club were not notified by its owners. Most people found out about the closure from other members or from the locked doors at the health club. I personally know many people who bought a one-year membership to Nautilus One less than three months ago, therefore, losing over $100 when they closed.

The duty of a community newspaper is to print the news which directly affects the members of the community. I feel that this is an item which affected many residents and these residents are still waiting for you to inform them. Sincerely, Terrence C. Asher Jr.

Why rush Christmas?

Last week I spent four days in Hattiesburg, and as I was coming back down Highway 49 in Gulfport, I saw something so astounding I had to pull over to look at it.

Somebody already had his outdoor Christmas decorations

I'm not talking about somebody who sells those decorations for a living and might have them around any time of year. The place was a service station. And I'm not talking about a few colored lights in the shrubbery.

This was one of those stations with a little square patch of lawn in front of it. There were large figurines of Santa Claus, a snowman and a few other holiday characters. There were not only lights in the shrubbery, but lights, tinsel and other trimmings were basically all over the place.

It wasn't the type of display, though, which is so elaborate that a person would have to start a month early just to get it finished for Christmas Day. I've seen those, and it can be fun to watch the progress as the decorating nears completion. What made me stop to look at this again had to do with something I saw in a store on Halloween night. '

I had gone over to Long Beach to take a final in one of my classes at USM, but the test hadn't taken very long. I got back to the Bay St. Louis side of the bridge about 8:30 p.m. and decided to do some quickie shopping on the way home.

I was headed for pet supplies to collect the cat food I had come to buy when I heard an announcement of a drastic price reduction on Halloween decorations. About the same time, I saw a stockboy pass with an armload of Christmas stuff.

It was obvious what was going on-these people were going to yank down the ghosts and goblins and hang up the tinsel and Santa caps.

I happen to enjoy Christmas. It's harder and harder in our mobile society to get families together but people seem to make a special effort to do so during the Christmas season and I like that. I'm also fond of colored lights, and although I've never been extravagant about it, I do enjoy decorating.

What I do not enjoy is seeing Christmas decorations in public places earlier and earlier each year. Seeing Christmas merchandise out on the shelves for the early shoppers is tolerable, but I do not want to see Christmas decorations until Thanksgiving.

I may not be a traditionalist about a whole lot of things, but I have a very traditional outlook on Christmas.

I have also never believed in having too much of a good thing, because if you do, you'll get tired of it. I feel that way about Christmas and I know others who do. Many of the people I know who work in retail businesses tell me around the second week of December that they're tired of Christmas even before it has arrived.

When I was a small child, my family's Christmas decorations were usually put up on Christmas Eve and taken down on Jan.6, which we children called "Three Kings' Day." As we got older, the decorating time was moved up to a week before Christmas, or sometimes a few days earlier so the work of setting up the tree could be done on a weekend.

Because I don't usually throw a Christmas party, I usually stick to that decorating schedule, but I like to take the stuff down on New Year's Eve. I have some pretty decorations, including some which were given to me as a unique wedding present, but they wouldn't be that special if I had them around all year long.

I don't want to get tired of Christmas and I don't really care for the commercialism of the holiday. If I were involved in a business where Christmas sales made a major difference, I might feel different about it.

In my trade, however, all Christmas guarantees is a couple of slow weeks on news and good weeks on photos or features about charity drives.

The year I went around taking pictures of Christmas decorations, I got a little tired of the holiday. It was just like the time I was not selective on Christmas party invitations and attended everything. I was. delighted to see all the people I liked, but got quite tired of red

Maybe if we didn't try to make Christmas last three months, we'd like it better and remember more readily what the holiday is really about.

CLUBS, AUXILIARIES

Diamondhead Garden Club

President Gerri Garberg called the Nov. 15 meeting of the Diamondhead Garden club to order and requested member Faye Johnson read the Collect. Following the Pledge of Allegiance, guests were introduced by Betty Cutler.

Kathy McFaull gave an informative presentation on wildflowers, which included slides as well as a display of wildflowers gleaned from the Diamondhead area. They were labeled so that members could learn the names.

During the meeting Kathy also presented horticultural tips for this time of year.

Litter control chairman Marion Kollasch told members she has information on the Adopt-a-Highway program. She asked members if they were interested in adopting a two-mile section of a state highway near the Diamondhead area, to be responsible for picking up litter several times a year.

Conservation chairman Jackie Toca urged members to fill in and return a form regarding the proposed recycling program for Dianondhead. She presented several ideas for using plastic items that are normally thrown away.

The Mardi Gras theme for Diamondhead this year is 'Children's Stories.' Garden Club float chairman Evelyn Kibler, assisted by Charlotte Renshew, explained the proposed entry for the Diamondhead Garden Club in the 1990 parade. The Diamondhead Garden Club has in the past been limited in membership to 99 active members. The board of directors recently proposed to the membership that the by-laws be changed to allow unlimited membership. This proposal was unanimously approved.

Nancy Shuback announced that the judging of Christmas home decorations would take place on Dec. 18 and 19. Garden of the Month Award was presented to Jere and Cleary Doussan, Diamondhead Drive East; Golf Course Award went to Pat and Les Stafford, Ahihi Street.

Gerri Garberg announced the new horticulture chairman is Betty Tracey. She replaces Kay Parker, who is moving.

Meeting hostesses, Cassie Boutte and Alvis Guillory, were thanked for their attractive Thanksgiving decorations and refreshments. Members attending brought non-perishable food items which were placed into large baskets at the Thanksgiving table. Audrey Dean made the gold "pumpkin turkey" centerpiece.

The president called upon Brierly Acker to introduce the guest speaker for the morning, Robert Leeton. Leeton is associated with Borja Nursery and is a member of the Gulfport Camellia Society and the Gulf Coast Rose Society.

He discussed camellia varieties, their characteristics and how to deal with problems which might arise in cultivating them. There are more than 200 species of camellias. Leeton stated the most general cause of failure of any garden camellia is improper planting. Pine trees provide ideal shade, and the plants need well-drained soil. Planting tips given were to plant with no dirt on top of the root ball, and to mulch with pine straw. His informative talk and question and answer session were very timely since November is the month in which to plant camellias.

On Wednesday, Oct. 25, the Clement R. Bontemps American Legion Auxiliary Unit 139 hosted a picnic for the veterans in Gulfport in the "Rec" hall.

Mrs. Lucille Boudreaux, VACS chairlady, and the volunteers Mmes. Evelyn Burns, Inez Bouis, Hazel Wohlschlegel, Judy Gavney and Genevieve Cole, served a hearty lunch of hamburgers, frankfurters and all the fixings to 120 veterans.

The joint cooperation of the auxiliary and the staff of the Hancock Medical Center X-ray Department made for a very happy and successful Halloween on Tuesday, Oct. 31 for the youngsters of the

Mrs. Pat Gillan, chairman of the youth and children committee, and her volunteers Oris Planchard, Ursula Favre, Genevieve Cole, Susan Piazza, Anna Brehm and Roslyn Weathers, supplied the refreshments. Assisting were "Pink Ladies," and members of a Girls Scouts troop, Jeanie Moran and her x-ray staff, and Joy Gillan, Miss Poppy of 1986.

The cafeteria was decorated in the theme of Halloween, spider webs and cob webs.

The "little people" who came to the hospital were in varied costumes. All in all, there were 200 "trick or treat" bags that were xrayed and 270 people enjoyed refreshments of drinks and cakes and cookies.

The regular monthly sing-a-long, sponsored by Unit 139 was Thursday, Nov. 2 at the Hotel Reed Nursing Center.

Lena Mae Oustalet played the piano and Oris Planchard visited the residents encouraging them to participate in the activity.

Mrs. Oustalet had invited her sisters who were visiting her from Shreveport, to join in the singing. They sang hymns, gospel songs and "oldies but goodies," and it turned into a lively party. Everyone had a great time and activity director Beth Gruzinskas was pleased at the response of the residents.

Refreshments were served. Mrs. Roslyn Weathers was missed because of illness.

Ever since Colonial Days in cranberry, along with many America, the relish tray has other foods. been almost as much a part of the Thanksgiving Feast as the traditional turkey, and the. tradition continues to this day in many homes. ## Low calorie, inexpensive beef for quick, homemade meal

Simple, home-cooked meals can be quite a challenge after a busy day at home or at the office. And for many smaller households it may seem like an impossibility.

The key to easy, homecooking fare for two is to select a simple, small-scale recipe. For added convenience use a quick cooking method.

One example of easy home cooking is Beef Steaks and Onions with Garlic Potatoes. This delicious two-serving entree has only 357 calories per serving. The recipe features boneless beef chuck top blade steaks. They are economical, often overlooked by the consumer and a perfect choice for panbroiling.

GOOD FOOD BUYS

Panbroiling, a dry heat cooking method, is one of the quickest ways to cook beef. Start by preheating a heavy frying pan for several minutes over medium heat.

Add no fat or water and remove any drippings as they accumulate to keep calories to a minimum. To cook the boneless blade steaks in this recipe, begin by seasoning the steaks with fragrant rosemary and cracked pepper and panbroil for six to eight minutes.

Sweet caramelized onions are the ideal accompaniment to the panbroiled beef top blade steaks. To caramelize onions, saute thinly sliced onions ten minutes over medium heat. Sprinkle the sauteed onions with sugar and continue stirring until the onions are thoroughly coated.

Serve the steak and onions with Garlic Potatoes which are simply boiled and tossed with crushed garlic; diced green onions and a touch of butter,
